

EVALUATING YOUR SUBMISSIONS

- The first submission for a question will be considered.
- Provide smaller and better code, if where possible. Including comments to increase readability may give your score a boost.
- Your logical ideas and methods are considered.
- Align and indent the code if where possible. Avoid syntax errors.
- Your submission will still be evaluated if it is incomplete or have few errors. The logic of the code and core elements will be taken into consideration.
- Each question has different marks based on the difficulty level of questions. The code occupies 60% of the score while the diagram shall occupy 40% of the score for the particular question.
- If multiple candidates score the same, the time of submission will be taken into account to break the tie.
- The decisions made by the judging panel shall be considered as final.
